Getting Started: How Does This Course Work?

0:06 / 2:42 1x

Is this course for me?

This course is aimed at a general audience interested in photography and is designed to help build skills in looking critically at photographs. No prior knowledge of studio photography or history of photography is required.

What if I need more time?

The course is organized around six thematic weeks of content, but you can take the course at your own pace. There is no penalty for speeding up or taking more time. You can always reset your deadlines to fit your schedule without losing your work or progress in the course, and you will continue to have access to the course and all resources indefinitely after completing it.

Will I learn how to make or edit photographs in this course? Will I be able to share my own photographs in this course?

Seeing Through Photographs is not a technical course and does not address specific skills for making or editing photographs. However, by exploring artists' choices—from composing photographs to understanding how they are printed and distributed—you will learn to look and think critically about photographs and images, and may find some inspiration for the photographs you make. Each week ends with an optional creative prompt for you to make, share, and discuss photographs in response to that week's theme and receive feedback from peers.

How do I make sure I'm subscribed to course messages?

You can use your Account Settings page to control how many and what type of emails you get from Coursera and MoMA.

To subscribe or unsubscribe from emails:

1. Open your Coursera Settings page.
2. On the left side of the screen, click Email Preferences.
3. Use the checkboxes to choose what kinds of emails you'd like to get from Coursera, each course you're enrolled in, and MoMA (at the bottom of the page). Make sure you've selected "Announcements" to receive messages from the Instructor.
4. Click Save.

What if I need technical help?

Your best resource for technical help is the Coursera Help Center. The Coursera Help Center includes guides on how to use Coursera and you can connect with Technical Support to troubleshoot problems. A good place to start is the guide to solving problems on Coursera.

Is there any way to get help in paying for a certificate?

All learners can apply for financial aid or a scholarship from Coursera. Learn more.

What should I do after I complete the course?

After completing Seeing Through Photographs, we hope you will dive deeper into modern and contemporary art and design by enrolling in more of MoMA's courses or our 3-course Specialization. Stay subscribed to messages from Seeing Through Photographs to continue receiving new MoMA resources.
