Power: sources and resources

0:06 / 0:47 1x

From power as it is wielded by people, we now move to the power held within the earth. The artists, architects, and designers in this section focus on some of our essential natural resources. In some of the work you'll encounter here, you'll follow a rocket ride to Mars in search of clean water, trace the route of copper from the Western United States to China, visit a park made from recycled petroleum industry materials in Norway, and go to the depths of the Persian Gulf to discover the many effects of our current dependence on oil now and into the future.

Underlying the wide-ranging works in this final lesson is a question and challenge: How should we use our own power to construct better relationships with our environment and each other?
